W. Edmund Clark Lecture

Krishna Pendakur

Distinguished SFU Professor and Professor of Economics at Simon Fraser University. Professor Pendakur has spent the last three decades studying inequality, poverty and discrimination in Canada and around the world.

What Should We Do About Rising Inequality?

Krishna Pendakur is Professor of Economics at Simon Fraser University, Canada. From 2007 to 2013 he was Co-Director of Metropolis British Columbia (MBC), Center of Excellence for Research on Immigration and Diversity, an interdisciplinary policy research center which connects academic researchers with policy-makers in government and NGO communities. His research focuses on consumer demand econometrics, with an emphasis on the measurement of the cost-of-living, inequality, discrimination and poverty, in a variety of international contexts. He has made major contributions in four areas: work on structural semi- and nonparametric econometric models; research on consumer demand analysis; work on unobserved heterogeneity; and papers on inequality and poverty.
